Celebrating 25 years of >>venture>>
Switzerland’s leading startup competition
Dear >>venture>> community,

What an honor it is to be here with you this evening to celebrate 25 years of >>venture>>, or rather, Swiss innovation, the spirit of entrepreneurship, and an entire ecosystem built to help them thrive.

25 years ago, our entrepreneurial landscape looked very different. As one of the first players in the Swiss startup ecosystem, >>venture>> was founded in hopes of helping boost early-stage startups, and guiding those who dared to dream of bringing their innovative visions to market.

Today, the overall startup ecosystem in Switzerland is quite crowded, and that's a good thing. Still, >>venture>> proudly counts on an average of 350 innovative business submissions per year, reaching our fourth consecutive record-breaking year with a total of 358 submissions.

>>venture>> owes a great part of its success to the commitment and quality of the over 200 jurors and mentors who help shine the light onto the path of success. Our warmest appreciation goes out to them for dedicating countless hours to our competition on a pro-bono basis.

2022 also marks the first year we add Sustainability and Impact as a criterion into the competition. This solidifies our belief that no entrepreneur is too young to start considering ways their business could create a positive impact in our ever-changing world.

All of this is only possible with the support of our expanding Advisory Board, to whom we extend our deepest gratitude.

On behalf of the >>venture>> foundation board, we thank you for joining us this evening and hope you find yourself inspired by the winning teams tonight. Congratulations to the 2022 >>venture>> winners! We’re sure this is the beginning of an incredible journey for you.

Ulrich Looser
Chairman of the >>venture>> foundation
Partner of BLR & Partners AG

Lea Firmin
CEO of the >>venture>> foundation

The year was 1997, and like most people stuck in traffic, Thomas Knecht was listening to the radio. A news report describing the current fragile state of the Swiss economy caught his attention. Yet another round of layoffs was announced, and Switzerland was lacking new innovative Swiss-born corporations such as Nestle or Roche that had sustained the growth of the Swiss economy since their foundation a century ago.

This was when >>venture<< was born. Thomas Knecht convinced his colleagues at McKinsey & Company to work together with ETH Zurich to create a startup competition that would empower entrepreneurs and foster innovation across Switzerland.

Fast forward to 25 years later, Switzerland now enjoys a thriving startup ecosystem. >>venture<< has hit a record number of submissions for the past 4 consecutive years, has onboarded its highest number of corporate sponsors and is now co-organized by some of the most important drivers of innovation: ETH Zurich, McKinsey & Company, Knecht Holding, Innosuisse, and EPFL.

As any good business(wo)man knows, change is the only constant, and the ability to adapt is key. Throughout the years the >>venture<< network has had a lot to share with budding entrepreneurs, but >>venture<< has also learned from its participants.

Today, the competition looks different from when it was created. A lot has changed in the past 25 years, and >>venture<< has grown to meet the needs of the developing startup ecosystem. There are some pivotal aspects, however, that remain the same. >>venture<< continues to focus on early-stage startups. It is in this critical stage that the competition offers the most valuable resources: access to an incredible network, mentoring from some of the best-in-class industry experts, and non-dilutive funding.
